From Arthur's Home Gazette. Meeting of the Waters.

Among the most tender and beautiful of the Irish melodies is that known as "The Meeting of the Waters." In the summer of 1807, Moore paid a visit to the vale of Avoca, in the country of Wicklaw, where the rivers Avon and Avoca meet, a most lovely and enchanting spot. This visit suggested the song which has since been so wide a favorite, and which has as- and Miner. The Senate has its Cooper, Smith, Milsociated the vale of Avoca with all that is charming ler. There is not in this wide world a valley so sweet As that vale in whose boson the bright waters meet! Oh! the last days of feeling and life must depart, Ere the bloom of that valley shall fade from my heart.

Yet it was not that nature had shed o'er the scene Her purest of crystal and brighest of green; 'Twas not her soft magic of streamlet or hill, Oh! no, it was something more exquisite still. Twas that friends, the beloved of my bosom were near,

Who made every dear scene of enchantment more dear, And who felt how the best charms of nature improve When we see them reflected from looks that we love. Sweet vale of Avoca; how calm could I rest In thy bosom of shade, with the friends I love best;

"It was Ireland's summer twilight, lingering long as though loth to draw the curtain closely about a bright isle in a dark world like this. It was early in Epsom and Glauber Salts; Castor and Sweet Oil; Rhubart Jalap; Ipecae; Arrow Root; Cream Tartar; Carb. Soda; Gum Arabic; Assafeetida; Gum Camphor; Alex. Senna; a seared leaf was sprinkled on a bush or tree, to warn that autumn was near. For the first mile the road was smooth and broad, lined with trees, now and then a white gate with white stone pillars, opening to some neat cottate or domain: the glowing streaks of the setting sun had not left the western sky and glimmered through the trees; while the air made fragrant by the gentle shower, diffused through body and mind that calmness which seems to whisper: 'Be silent; it is Dead Shot; Fahnestock's Vermifuge; Cod Liver Oil; Ayer's calmness which seems to whisper: 'Be silent; it is Cherry Pectoral; Swayne's Syrup Wild Cherry; Balsam the vale of Avoca you are entering' We descended a declivity, and the vale opened upon us at the Meeting of the Waters.' The tree under which Moore sat when he wrote the sweet poem had been pointed to me in the morning. We now stood near the union of

RECEPTION OF KOSSUTH -The Inquirer says there is likely to be a very magnificent military parade, on the arrival of Kossuth in Philadelphia. It is probable, also, that the firemen and many of the civic societies will join in the demonstration. A New York letter

"I learn from one of the common council committee, that the arrangements for the reception of Kossuth, in this city, are on a scale that was never before equalled, not even in the case of Lafayette, which has ed again, found he was the loser, and role hastily always been considered as the ne plus ultra in matters down to the boat; but no intelligence could be obtainalways been considered as the ne plus ultra in matters of that sort. The Iron Duke.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, thus describes the appearance of the Duke of Wellington at the Peabody Festival, on the 4th of July : "As the old Duke entered the room, walking slowly, and bent with age, a rush was made on all sides towards him. The company, however, gave way, leaving a clear passage, and he came along .-In the crowd, on his way, several who knew him stepped out and shook hands with him; among whom noticed the Countess Paulette, with other noble las dies in her company. He cordially shook hands as he passed, and they, smiling and laughing, stood back again in the line of beauty, fashion, republicanism and nobility, along which he was making his way. He was dressed in plain clothes, in ball costume-knee breeches and silk stockings, and around his left leg, the insigna of the order of the Garter, shining with di-

"He looked well, bating the evident debitity of old age, which, to spectators, and especially those who, like myself, saw him for the first time, made the predominant feeling at sight of him to be a sort of compassion. His physiognomy was noble and striking, very like the common picture of him, with the remarkably prominent nose, yet an air of gentleness, quiet, kindness, and placidity was printed upon his countenance, producing an impression of his character very foreign to the thoughts which one had been prepared to entertain of him."
